Most of Exiles

NINETY PER cent of the Cubara living in exile in the United States and other countries would return to their honeland once the Fidel Castro regime has been overthrown, a former Cuban breasury minister estimated Monday.

Dr. Jose Alvarez Diaz, now president of the Cuban Exile Economists Association, said, however, that the return of the Cuban refugees would be in a series of states, not all at once.

He estimated 30 per cent would go home "immediately" after Castro is toppled; 40 per cent as soon as there are indications of political stability and job prospects; and 20 per cent later.

Batista Seen Out Of Exile Government

A FORMER Cuban kenator says that neither ex-President Fulgencio Batista nor, any of his close collaborators will participate in the formation of a proposed government in exile.

"But Gen. Batista is capable of forgetting past offenses and meet with all Cubans in support of an exile government," said Du Jose Gonzalez Puentes, a close friend of the Cuban dictator outed by Fidel Castro Jan. 1, 1950

The pro-Batista ex-senator said he fivors an exile government formula to set up a military apparatus for liberating Cuba from Castro-communica.
